Adventures On A

Street Car

Short Story Series

"Mildred, I've met him!" Marjory rushed into her sister's house.
"Who is him?" asked Mrs.
Morse."My fate! The grandest on earth. I don't know where I've seen any one half so splendid."
"But it's only two weeks ago, dear, that you were raving about Jim Ponsonby.""Don't mention his name in the same breath—James Ponsonby is a silk sock, high color, society dandy, while this one is a real man.""He's quite poor, I judge, that is so far as money goes, but Browning, or Roosevelt, or John Burns or some one else, I forget who said, 'A man is a man for a that,' and our minister is always preaching that money doesn't count. Such shoulders, Mildred, and those big, honest eyes!""Lovely, indeed! But where did you meet this paragon?" Marjory's sister was becoming interested."That's the funny part of it," said Marjory, pulling off her gloves. "It must have been fate that threw us together.""You see," she continued, "Dorothy's Sunday school class had collected 369 pennies for my poor children in the settlement. A week ago I stepped into the street car. I held the money box in my hand to take to my class. I don't know how, but the elastic band around the box snapped; the cover fell off, and 369 cents rolled over every inch of the street car. It's nothing to laugh at. Imagine my embarrassment. As a unit the passengers jumped to their feet to assist in the penny search. I alone remained seated, too dazed to move.""After what seemed an eternity, a tall handsome man stepped forward. He is my hero; the man who has changed the complexion of my whole young life.""Raising his hat, he said 'Pardon, miss, but I think we've found every cent. May I help you count them?'""He had a most refined voice, I nodded."Stop laughing, Mildred! If you had been there you wouldn't have thought it funny.""Now, listen to this coincidence and see if fate isn't getting busy.
I promised to bring my settlement youngsters some oranges, so yesterday I bought two dozen large ones. Unconscious of impending disaster I stepped into the car.""My oranges were in a strong bag. How it happened is beyond human comprehension, but somehow, the bag broke and twenty-four oranges rolled themselves over every inch of that car.""Think of my horror again, when, looking across the aisle, I gazed into the eyes of the very man who had collected the pennies for me the week before. My hero!"He recognized me instantly, and we both laughed, while everybody else in the car scampered for the rolling oranges. Finally we managed to rewrap the rebellious fruit.""If you will let me carry this for you," said the man, "perhaps no more accidents will occur before we get there." I told him his offer was very kind. It's three blocks from the car to the settlement house. In those three blocks I learned that he is employed by the telephone company. His is not a promising position, I judge, but as I said before, he is a real man and nothing else matters.""Majority, you are a goose, but you are a nice goose. Will you never grow up?""I wonder under what conditions I'll meet my hero next time?" pondered Majority. "Formeet him I must." And she did.
It was a week later. "It's too funny," said Marjory, "there's no use telling you. You won't believe it.""Well, hurry dear. Tell me before you explode.""Last night at nine o'clock our maid, Polly knocked at my door, and said 'Miss Marjory, may I be so bold as to tell you that I'm engaged to be married?' 'Good for you, Polly!' said I. 'So it's settled? I'm very glad.'""Miss Marjory," she went on,
'my friend has heard me speak so much of you, would you mind coming into the kitchen a minute to make his acquaintance?' 'Why, I'd love to meet your future husband, Polly,' I said."So I skipped down to the lower regions and, Mildred Morton Morse, who do you think is Polly's fiance? Will wonders never cease?
My hero of the pennies and the knight of the broken orange bag.
My telephone man! He looked at me. I looked at him. We looked at each other, then we both laughed, while Polly in surprise, said:
'You two must have met before!'"Hon. Francis Gay, was a returning passenger on Wednesday's Ki-nau.
Ben Vickers, the Regal Store representative arrived Wednesday morning.
